BIG PLAY HOUSE PLANNED FOR THE GROWING CITY

There is being projected the building of a big two story structure in Ada as a combination opera house, natatorium and skating rink.

Probably it will be built entirely by Ada capital. The plan is to build the swimming pool in the center of the ground floor and construct a commodious roller rink around the pool. The second floor would be occupied as an opera house, so arranged as to be comfortable summer or winter.

Such a place, kept clean, would be a boon to the city; also it should be a paying proposition, for unquestionably it would soon become the mecca of all seeking pleasure or recreation.

Since Ada is growing now and soon will grow greater, such a playhouse and place for athletic pastime is fast becoming a necessity.

You can't tell a woman's age after she takes Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. Her complexion is fine. She is round, plump and handsome; in fact, she is young again. 35 cents. Tea or Tablets. G. M. Ramsey.

HASKELL AND WILLIAMS ADA'S GUESTS SATURDAY

As was advertised during the week, C. N. Haskell spoke at the court house Saturday night. His subject was "The Constitution."

It was quite a pleasant surprise to many when Delegate Bob Williams walked into the hall with Mr. Haskell, he being here between trains enroute to Guthrie.

The two speakers were presented to the audience by Delegate Carlton Weaver in a few well chosen words, complimenting each for their valuable work in the convention.

Mr. Haskell was the first speaker and plunged at once into his subject. He had no prepared speech. He did not need one. He is so thoroughly familiar with the subject that there is not a section, sentence or clause which he can not talk about and explain fully. His method of presenting it, and particularly with the Asp constitution, the "red light," makes conclusions so conclusive as to be an argument the republicans will never be able to meet. Among other things he said:

"Some newspapers had kept standing in type the charge that the convention was enacting legislation and not making a constitution, using it day after day. He said not a constitution for twenty years had not been made which consisted of less than forty-five pages, yet one editor claimed he could write it on a page and a half of paper. That editor would not know a constitution from 'Beecher's Life of Christ' if he was to meet it in the road.

"There are three classes who think there is too much legislation in the constitution. First, the man who reads the newspapers and believes all they say; second, those who do not know; third, the railroad magnate who stood by and saw the lumber trust pinched the other day and wanted legislation stopped before his turn came.

"These are the three kinds of kickers against the constitution and I have not an apology to offer for a single line between the 'kickers' of that book."

Mr. Haskell spoke about an hour and thirty minutes and gave a most excellent analysis of the constitution.

Delegate Bob Williams was next presented to the large audience and after paying a tribute to the "Young Rome" and the thriftiness of her citizens he spoke in general of the work of the convention. He was warmly received, as he always is when he visits Ada.

Mr. Haskell is on a tour through the state defending the work of the convention and making votes for its ratification.

Mr. Williams was enroute to Guthrie where he will join the editing committee in the final work on the constitution.

GREER COUNTY AGAIN SUES TO PREVENT DISMEMBERMENT

Delegate Carlton Weaver is today in receipt of official notice that he and all the other delegates to the constitutional convention have been again sued by the Greer county folk who resent division of the county. March 28th is the day set for hearing on the application for injunctive relief.

The Greer county commissioners Saturday refiled their suit for injunction against the constitutional convention, seeking to prevent the division of that county as contemplated in the constitution. The action was first brought a month ago in the Oklahoma supreme court and ruled out upon a decision that the supreme court was not of original jurisdiction to try injunction cases. The case this time comes up in the district court, Judge Burford presiding.

The supreme court did not pass upon the merits of the application, although it was known five of the seven judges presiding were of the opinion that the convention exceeded its authority in disturbing county lines in old Oklahoma other than it would have been incidental to the establishment of a state government. Judge Irwin dissented, holding the court had ample jurisdiction to pass upon the application. The new suit differs very little from the original cause. All members of the convention are named as defendants. Attorneys for Greer county are Charles Eakin, A. R. Garrett and A. M. Stewart, all of Mangum, and Horace Speed of Guthrie. The petition alleges that the convention has disregarded the law in tampering with the county lines, they having been established by act of Congress, and sought to rob the people of Greer county of taxable property by an illegal and unwarranted assumption of authority in no wise delegated to or possessed by the convention, and by the flagrant usurpation of purely legislative power and functions, wholly foreign to the purposes for which it was called.

The petition also recites that once approved by the people and the president of the United States, no matter how illegal the convention's acts may be, they become fixed law, and Greer county would be without remedy whatever. The court's intervention is asked in the convention's submission of the question to the people. A separate suit will be filed against the supreme election board named in the convention's election ordinance.

WILL HAYES GROUND TO PIECES BY M. K. & T. ENGINE

The mangled body of Will R. Hayes, a leading fullblood Indian of this county, was found on the M. K. & T. track Saturday night at 8:40 o'clock after being crushed by the front trucks of the south bound local freight engine, No. 563.

The unfortunate man, about an hour before the accident, was seen in town. It is thought he had started alone for the home of his cousin, Daniel Hayes, or that of his uncle, Senator Amos Hayes, both of whom live southeast of town not far distant. When he had gone about 400 yards south of the station, supposedly overcome by drink he lay down across the track.

While switching down that way the engineer felt the engine strike some object. He says at the time they were going only three miles an hour, and both he and the fireman were looking back for signals. After backing up it was discovered a wheel had severed the cranium entirely from the body. Also the left arm was cut off, the left side horribly lacerated, and the toes of one foot crushed off. Soon after the gruesome discovery the body was identified and after inspection by officers was removed to an undertaker's establishment.

The deceased, until a few weeks ago, was living at Roff. He leaves a wife and two children. Being a member of the Odd Fellows, a large number of the membership of that order went out Sunday afternoon and conducted the funeral, which occurred in the Indian cemetery near Amos Hayes.

Millinery Magnificent.

The millinery store of Mrs. W. A. Alexander, on the occasion of her opening Saturday, was a scene of beauty.

Each show window was tastefully decorated, one in lavender and mals with a gorgeous white pattern hat in the center; the other in rose color setting off superb offerings in street wear.

Entering, one beheld a lovely profusion of pattern hats, trimmings, hand made creations, potted plants, bouquets and festoons of flowers—such a dazzling profusion as to baffle the pencil of a man reporter.

All day long the store was the mecca of critical lovers of millinery.

Opportunity to furnish your home on easy payment is now "up" to you. If you do not take advantage of it you will make a mistake. A small cash payment, a small payment every week or every two weeks, just to suit your pay-day, and soon your home will be made happy by the comfort, convenience and beauty of new furnishings.

A Kitchen Cabinet is a great convenience and saves many a step and much labor. There is a place for 50 pounds of flour, for meal, sugar spices, etc., all right at hand. Price, Base and Top $12.50, $2.50 down and $2.00 per week, or sold separately Base $6.50, Top $6.00 with payments reduced one-half.

A Kitchen Safe is an absolute necessity. We have them from $3.50 to $7.00, $1.00 down and $1.00 per week.

We again call attention to our Undertaking Department. Coffins, Caskets, Hearse, Embalmer and Undertaker, who will, when requested, take complete charge of funeral.

SOME RAILROAD NOTES OF INTEREST TO THIS SECTION

Guthrie, Ok., March 25.—An amended charter has been filed by the Choctaw, Newcastle and Western railroad, which proposes to build from Lawton via Ada to South McAlester, with a belt around South McAlester, and a branch line to Newcastle and Krebs. The estimated length is 200 miles and the cost $4,000,000. It is capitalized at $5,000,000. Lawton is the headquarters and the incorporators: J. R. LeBasquet of Little Rock, Ark., L. C. Rose and A. W. Underwood of Chicago, S. T. Pierson and W. P. Dix of Shawnee.

Denison, Tex., March 25.—No more will the red-shirted section man be a picturesque figure along the line of the M. K. & T. Red shirts are tabooed for section men—by a general order which has been issued by General Superintendent E. M. Alvord of the Katy lines north of Denison. Mr. Alvord says they are not to be worn and in future it will be worth a section foreman's job to allow one of his men to come to work wearing a passionate colored shirt. This order, it is believed, will cause riots and strikes where Mexicans are employed.

The order was issued because an engineer mistook a red flag for a section man's shirt and almost got into trouble. The engineer cleared himself, but it was the death knell of the red shirt.

General Manager W. C. Nixon of the Frisco has announced a reorganization of operating divisions on the system, effective April 1. Under this change the new division, which will be known as the Red River division, will be under the first district, instead of under General Superintendent W. B. Drake of Fort Worth, as has been rumored.

The system will be divided into three districts, general superintendents of the first and second districts will have headquarters at Springfield, Mo., and of the third district at Chaffee, Mo.

In the first district parts of the central and southwestern divisions were cut off to form the new Red River division, which will be in charge of Superintendent J. W. Walton, formerly superintendent of the Katy at Parsons, Kansas. The three divisions will be as follows under the new arrangement:

Central Division—Monett to Red River via Fort Smith; Fayetteville, Ark., to Okmulgee, I. T.; Bentonville, St. Paul and Mansfield branches; headquarters, Fort Smith, Ark.

Southwestern Division—Monett to Red river via Lawton; headquarters, Sapulpa, I. T.

Red River Division—Sapulpa, I. T., to Red river via Francis; Hope, Ark., to Ardmore, I. T.; Sulphur branch and the Platter cut-off; headquarters, Francis, I. T.

ADA, CHICKASAW NATION, INDIAN TERRITORY.

The biggest little city in the new commonwealth. The city that has never experienced either a boom or a blow. During its six years' life it has gradually grown into a commercial and railroad center of 4,600 population. The growth has been natural, solid, and enduring.

A big Portland cement plant with a pay roll of $3,500 per week, in process of construction; $40,000 worth of waterworks improvement, including a mammoth reservoir to furnish abundant water for factories.

Society excellent, good schools and strong churches; unsurpassed agricultural section; six railroad outlets; five more such outlets under contract to build by September, 1907, bonuses are raised.

Veritably Ada

is a city built upon a rock, and it will stand. It is in the logical belt of various mineral resources. Court town for 16th Recording District and unquestionably a county seat under statehood. Not a rival town within a radius of 40 miles. In a cotton country, but not dependent upon cotton. Healthful climate; good water. Low taxes; real estate values reasonable, but rising. Ada is the place pre-eminent to live or invest in. Better get in on the ground floor before the skyscrapers come.

INDIAN OF MEXICO DOCILE

Essentially a Man of Peace, He Wants to Be Let Alone.

The simple minded, patient, docile Indian of Mexico is eminently peaceful. Bountiful nature and perpetual summer combine to palliate his improvidence. He can not see the necessity of laying up anything for a rainy day. It rains half the days in Mexico anyhow, but that only makes the mangoes grow larger and cheaper. If he has no tortillas today some of his neighbors have, and they will gladly share, for conditions may be reversed tomorrow, says Modern Mexico.

These Mexican Indians make the best and the poorest servants in the world. Their greatest charm from this standpoint is their perfect appreciation of their position. Always polite, never presuming, with hat in hand, it is always "your servant" and "with your permission." In the household they ask a half holiday once a fortnight with never a word of complaint when working hours last from daylight to midnight.

The Mexican Indian does not want to fight. All he asks is to be let alone. His politeness and affectionate nature are inborn. His love for children is particularly marked. It is a common sight to see a laborer in the street with but two pieces of white cotton clothing to his back or his name stop a woman with a baby in her arms and, holding the child's face between both his hands, deliver a resounding smack and chuck it under the chin. And in the same unconscious and entirely unaffected manner will a young man take his sombrero from his head and reverently kiss the hand of some ancient relative in a tattered dress when he encounters her in the crowded thoroughfare.

TWO OLD CRONIES CELEBRATE.

Have Their Own Way of Observing the Spirit of Christmas.

"For many years," said Mr. Frank L. Shafer, of Cincinnati, at the Arlington, "a couple of old cronies of my acquaintance have had a unique way of celebrating their friendship on Christmas day.

"Punctually at noon on December 24, they meet at a certain rendezvous and Bill opens the game by buying a quart of wine. When this is consumed Tom makes a purchase of a second quart, the drinking of which consumes much time, and the story of their years is told and retold.

"The finale, which is an act of great seriousness, consists of Bill going down into the depths of his trousers and pulling forth a $20 gold piece, which he presents to his chum as an evidence of sincere appreciation. Without the loss of a second Tom makes a dive for his pocket and extends to the other, a double eagle, accompanying the gift with fervent expressions of everlasting friendship. This quaint custom appears to be original with the principals of my story, and without going into detailed argument it would seem their plan is not altogether without merit."—Washington Herald.

Her Reason.

"And does your mother kiss you every day when you come home from school?" "Yes, sir." "She must be very fond of you." "No; she wants to see if I've been smoking cigarettes."

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

THE PROTRACTED MEETING.

One Hundred and Fifty Dollars Raised For Missions.

The protracted meeting at the Baptist church is in progress and the services of yesterday were interesting and well attended. On account of the meeting no other service in the city was held, and many were turned away for lack of room. The subject for the evening service was "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world." Rev. Harrell handled the subject well and one of the best sermons of the season resulted.

At the morning service a committee was named to request the business men to close their places at 7 p. m. in order that they and their clerks might attend the evening services.

At the morning service a mission collection was taken which amounted to $150.

A singer has been engaged and is expected to arrive on tomorrow. Everybody is urged to attend the meeting and assist in the services.

In the Southern army he learned to be a minute man, so at once he boarded the East Texas train. Also in the Southern army he learned many of the good impulses which have in a myriad ways characterized his mature years.

The News affectionately welcomes the father.

PRAISE FOR TERRELL.

His Old Home Folks Commend Him to Pontotoc County.

Below is published a comment on Joel Terrell's candidacy for county judge of Pontotoc, as it appears in the Paris (Tex.) Morning News, a leading paper in the county where Mr. Terrell was reared:

"We notice in a recent issue of the Ada (I. T.) Evening News the announcement of Joel Terrell, an old Lamar county boy, as a candidate for county judge of Pontotoc county in the new state of Oklahoma. We trust Joel's aspirations may be realized in this instance, and that he may climb even higher up the ladder of success. Born and reared in this county, a scion of an old and highly respected family, the son of an ex-Confederate soldier, largely self-made and self-educated, a clean, honorable young man, he is the very type of men who should be the political leaders in a new commonwealth, made up by the blending of Southern and Western people. Joel received his early education in our common country schools, took an academic course in Whitewright college, alternately teaching school and attending college, in order to work his way through the pay-as-you-go plan. He afterwards took a law course at the University of Texas, graduating in the class of 1902, and locating in Paris, where he practiced law for three or four years. His conduct here both as a lawyer and as a man was above reproach, and he took high rank among the younger members of our bar. Unlike many adventurers who flock to a new country—men who flee from their shady deeds in other sections—Joel Terrell's life has been an open book in our midst—a record of honorable living. We feel that the people of his adopted home will make no mistake in electing him to the responsible office of county judge."

Mr. Johnson Smashed Some More

When The News wrote up, Saturday afternoon, the visit of Mr. Johnson, the government liquor smasher, Mr. Johnson was not yet through with the town. Later he visited the drug stores and in one of them found some patent medicines whose manufacturers had put in more preservative alcohol than would pass his critical judgment. Accordingly he held a little smashing bee and the air in the store's rear was for a long time heavy with medicinal odors.

Mrs. Brooks at Home.

Following the action of Judge Dickerson in allowing bail to Mrs. Mary E. Brooks, accused of murdering Dr. Davenport, the required $1,000 bond was readily furnished by well known Ada men.

Saturday afternoon she was released from the U. S. jail at Ardmore and came immediately to Ada. She was accompanied by her father, R. E. Blye, who lives near Stigler, I. T. She has returned to her home at Francis with the avowed intention of going to her husband at Batesville, Ark.

The accused woman still stoutly protests her innocence; says she has nothing to fear, nor anything to regret save the humiliating exposure of her criminal intimacy with the dead physician, the shame of which must eventually be known to her children.

Public opinion touching the tragedy is much divided, not only among those informed solely by hearsay, but also among the officers and other people who visited the scene of the tragedy. Those who believe in the woman's innocence think investigators of the crime jumped too far to conclusions, assuming too much from the past relations of the woman and the physician. Some think those suspicious tracks of two men leading southward from the scene of the killing were not investigated sufficiently.

With the passing of the days the mystery seems to intensify, and a satisfactory hypothesis more becomes difficult to arrive at.

Exceptionally Good Attraction.

"A Royal Slave," the attraction at the opera house Saturday night, was up against it in the way of a crowd. Perhaps the advanced prices scared some away, but no doubt the slim attendance was chiefly attributable to a big political gathering at the court house, and to other gatherings in the city.

But it is just to say those who failed to go missed a theatrical treat of a character that seldom is afforded an Ada audience. Scarcely was there a weak figure in the cast, indeed the bulk of the company was exceptionally strong.

The play is a story of old Mexico, with a touch of the historical, bristling with tropical tragedy, aglow with tropical love and pathos—at all times gorgeous in tropical color.

While all three of the ladies in the cast are to be praised, the work of Marie Van Tassel, as the countess, was notably fine. Her's is a very heavy part in which she is swayed by terrific storms of conflicting passions.

Possibly this company will be secured for a return engagement, in which case no doubt they will be greeted by a crowded house.

Ill-Gotten Gains Are of Small Avail in Days of Misfortune

Retributive Fate that has overtaken Members of the Clark Street Gang of Gamblers and Bunco Men of which Mike McDonald was Chief.

Chicago. — The papers announce that "Mike" McDonald, millionaire retired gambler, is on the verge of collapse from the effects of the trouble that has come to him in his old age. His third wife is in jail for the murder of Webster Guerin, the lover whose coldness drove her to insane jealousy and desperation. His second wife, according to the news dispatches, is dying in New Jersey. Traveling on the shady side of 60, McDonald faces physical breakdown and old age in which his ill-gotten dollars must be his only comfort.

Not long ago "Al" Adams, millionaire policy "king" of New York, committed suicide after serving a term in prison for robbing the poor through his policy games. He still had a fortune, and his family, who suffered the social taint of the father, continued to live in a brownstone palace. But his dollars gave "Al" Adams cold comfort in his old age.

Twenty-five years ago there flourished in Chicago the "Clark street gambling gang," with McDonald at its head. This crowd made a chapter of history, but it is not the kind of history that is written into books recording the city's growth. Instead, it is to be found in the records of the police, and in the memories of men whose business, legitimate or otherwise, brought them into contact with the members of the gang.

Misery in Polluted Cash.

Not only was McDonald the member of this lot who retired from gambling with the most money, but he was the one whose career after he had quit gambling seemed to refute the argument that money which is not only tainted but thoroughly polluted cannot bring happiness. Now that the tragic chapter of the murder of her lover by his wife has been added, even the seeming refutation of McDonald's career has been destroyed. The fate of the rest of the crowd gives abundant evidence that the mills of the gods grind just as fine in these days as of old.

John Deming, one of the well-known Clark street figures in the days when that street was known from coast to coast on account of its vice, became a pauper and died.

"Bob" McCune, alias Kefster Bob, is now a tramp in New York, a plain va-

pered financially except McDonald himself, was Patrick Casey, who had charge of the bar. Casey saved his money and died a few years ago fairly well off.

Others Pursued by Fate.

James Papes, who was a thief as well as a gambler, broke into the treasury of Springfield, Ill., and died after fleeing to Canada to escape the penalty of his crime.

"Jimmy" Carroll, another of the crowd that alternated gambling with stealing and who made the police a world of trouble, continued his outlaw career until he died, seven years ago, in abject poverty.

Joseph Lewis, alias "Hungry Joe," is said to have renounced his former ways, is making an honest living and is doing better from the material standpoint than most of the men he formerly associated with.

"Jimmy" Hoey, one of the most notorious denizens of Clark street in the "wide-open" days and a gambler who stole, got into a fight with Al Walters, a barkeeper in the saloon of "Count" Riley in Clark street, and shot and killed him. He was tried and acquitted.

Most of the gambling men who committed murder in Clark street in those days were acquitted, in fact, owing to the strength of the pull of the entire gang with the police and the courts. Hoey afterward married Mollie Holbrook, the widow of "Buck" Holbrook, a burglar, who was killed at Hennepin, Ill. Hoey and his wife went to Europe and have not been heard of in Chicago since.

Reign of the Bunko Men.

Clark street became as infamous for the bunko game in the days of the McDonald crowd as for gambling. The bunko steers were gamblers, and the gamblers, or many of them, were bunko steers. Harry Lawrence was one of the best known of the bunko men. Before McDonald became known as the gambler king of the city he was strongly interested in the bunko game.

In brief, the bunko game was operated in this way: The steers, well-dressed and suave, sought their prey in the hotels principally. Steerer No. 1 accosted the stranger, called him by any name that happened to occur to him. The prospective victim eyed the stranger with suspicion and told him stranger's town, and told him a string of boyhood happenings that never happened, but which the prospective victim could not dispute.

"By the way," steerer No. 2 would say, "I bought a ticket in a lottery the other day. Let's drop into the lottery office and see if I won anything."

There were a number of these "offices." A prosperous looking man sat at the desk, and the walls were covered with fake lists and reports of lottery drawings. In front of the man at the desk was a big, glittering pile of gold coin. The ticket was presented. Baiting the Sharp Trap.

"You are lucky," said the man at the desk to steerer No. 2. "You have won $2,500."

The cash was paid over to steerer No. 2, while the eyes of the countryman bulged at the sight of so much "easy" money. That was the beginning. The victim was told there were drawings every day. Usually he bought a ticket, but no matter whether he did or not, the steerer stuck close to him and spent money on him, principally for liquor. They would return to the "lottery office" and after some talk between the manager and the steerer the latter would agree to bet against a card game. Always he was lucky and sometimes he won large amounts. It became a comparatively easy matter to draw the farmer or country merchant into the betting. As soon as he had lost all the bunko man thought he had with him he was steered out of the place and the "lottery" was quicker than that of many of his associates, for he was stabbed by George Russell, alias White Pine, a bunko man. Russell acquired his alias from the fact that he came to Chicago from White Pine, Nev. He was a fighting man of the western type, but was acquitted in his trial for the stabbing of Sir James.

Jere Dunn in the Street.

But best known of all, not excepting McDonald himself, was Jere Dunn, slayer of "Jimmy" Elliott, the heavy-weight prize fighter. Clark street during the reign of McDonald was the Mecca of many crooks, gamblers, confidence men, "bad" men and other classes of disreputables, but no figure ever appeared in the street who, by force of his all-around wickedness, commanded the attention that Jere Dunn got. Even Dunn's friends did not claim for him any degree of morals. Some of them say that he was "square" with his partners in crime, but his history disproves even that contention. One of the men who knew him best says that Dunn never knew what physical fear was. If this was true it is about all the good that can be said of him, even after his death. Dunn died in New Jersey last year of malignant cancer. Wherever he went he made criminal history and some of it is worth re-telling in any narrative of the Clark street crowd.

This notorious character made his appearance in Clark street in the early '80s. The vicious atmosphere of the terry" headquarters were switched to another room.

Tragic Finish of the Hankins.

Jeff and Al Hankins opened a gambling house at 125 Clark street. Al afterward bought a stock farm in Indiana, expecting to settle down and get away from the life he had led. Not long afterward he was found suffocated to death in a folding bed. An investigation was made, but it was stopped when it was found that to pursue it would destroy at least one reputation. Jeff Hankins dropped dead of heart disease about ten years ago. No name was better known in Clark street in the "wide-open" days than that of Hankins. George was the prey of all the boodling politicians in the county—and there were more of them then than now—and was intimately associated with the boodling ring in the county board. He is said to have furnished the largest part of the fund of $190,000 which was futilely spent in trying to have passed a state law legalizing pool selling on race tracks.

Garritys Were Fighting Men.

Then there were the Garrity brothers, John, Hugh and Mike. They were an especially tough trio and known as fighting men. They were guilty of numerous assaults, some of them of the most serious character. It was John Garrity who bit an ear off of Alderman James Peavey, who was also a gambler. The men had engaged in a fight and in the absence of more deadly weapons Garrity used his teeth on the part of the alderman's anatomy that was most convenient. Hugh and Mike Garrity are dead, having fallen into poverty, and the same ill fortune that pursued most of their fellows. On one occasion, also, the Garrity brothers, in the course of a gamblers' feud with John Dowling, who ran a rival establishment proceeded to beat Dowling up in frightful fashion. Dowling was one of the characters of the old Clark street that was at once one of the best and one of the worst. He was brutal and often beat men with the butt of the big revolver he carried, for no stronger apparent reason than a desire to see them fall. At the same time he was generous to the unfortunate, and as a result had many of the most bitter enemies and a great many staunch friends. Dowling lost his money after Clark street was closed to the big gamblers and died of paralysis five years ago.

One of the picturesque characters of the street was James Watson, alias Sir James, alias the Big Englishman.

street was intense in the nostrils of Dunn. In 1883 he got into a fight with "Jimmy" Hoey, a thief and gambler, and shot him in the groin. Hoey refused to appear against Dunn when the case came up for trial.

The Killing of Elliott.

Elliott, with the professional oarsman Plaisted, was in "Appetite Bill" Langdon's place on the evening of March 1, 1883, when Dunn entered. From this point in the story there is a wide divergence in the alleged facts. Dunn, always vain and always boastful, gave a version to the effect that he was attacked by Elliott and fought him single-handed for half an hour after everyone else had fled in terror. Elliott was more than six feet tall and a giant in strength. Dunn claimed he shot his enemy only after the latter had forced him to the floor and was holding a cocked revolver against his breast. The other side of the story is that Dunn entered the place, found Elliott sitting at a table and, without warning and without giving Elliott any chance for his life, shot him in cold blood.

Acquitted of the Crime.

Luther Ladin Mills was state's attorney, and the trial was of unusual interest. But the jury acquitted Dunn on the ground of self-defense. Afterward Dunn went east, became interested in race horses through the gift of an interest in a horse by a friend and soon became a some prominence on the eastern turf. He virtually was driven out of Chicago because the authorities, who in those days tolerated almost everything that was bad, decided that Jere Dunn was too disreputable and dangerous for even Clark street to harbor. In his advancing years he fell back on his power over women and married one much younger than himself who had money enough to support him.

Thus has death or poverty overtaken most of the old Clark street crowd. In many cases it was both. In some instances, as in the case of McDonald, health and fortune have been left, but fate has played him tricks even less acceptable than death or destitution.

In this later day misfortune seems to follow the men who have accumulated vast fortunes of "tainted" money. The old Clark street money was polluted, and the misfortunes of the old crowd seem greater than those of the owners of tainted money.

Does money bring misfortune in proportion to the depth of the taint it carries?

A DOWN EAST MINE.

COPPER DEPOSIT BEING WORKED IN WESTERN MASSACHUSETTS.

Thriving Small Mining Community Which Is Doing Business in Hoosac Hills — Looks Like Western Mining Camp.

One would not naturally look for a copper mine in old Massachusetts, but such is one of the surprises one would meet with in traveling through the Hoosac hills in the valley of the Deerfield, for there would be found a mining community which looks for all like a western mining camp, barring, perhaps, the saloons and the gambling places, and might be appropriately called the "Leadville of New England."

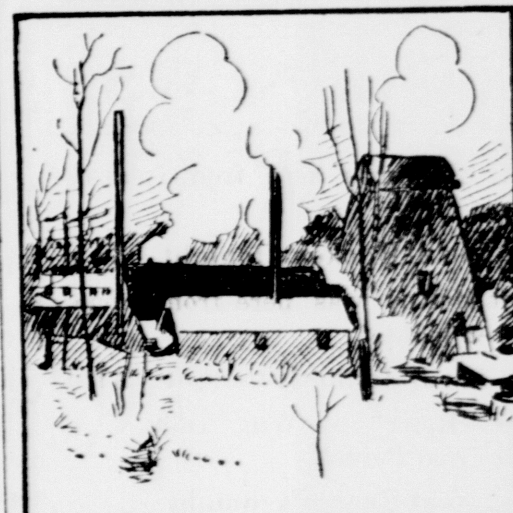

A well defined mineral belt appears in the hills of southern Vermont and continues, with varying richness of surface showings, across the state of Massachusetts to the south, some say as far as Virginia. Whatever may be its extent, there certainly is ample evidence of no little wealth underground, but the great problem is to find the best points where it may be extracted at a maximum of profit—the same old problem that dominates the search for gold, silver, copper and iron, wherever they exist, and on the successful solution of which depends the development of satisfactory mining properties.

Mining is not new in Clarendon and its vicinity, but a boom like the present one is distinctly new there. For nearly a quarter of a century the largest pyrites mine in the United States has been profitably operated in the little settlement of Davis, in the town of Rowe, just to the northwest of Clarendon but better known in connection with the latter town because Clarendon is the point of shipment for ore to concerns throughout the state east of the Mississippi.

The great vein of pyrites—the largest known deposits in the world outside of Spain—is a part of the mineral belt which cuts across Massachusetts just east of the main Housatonic range. Where there is an immense body of pyrites it is generally safe to assume that copper, as well, exists, and it has been found to be the case in this instance, several pockets having been discovered in the pyrites domain of the Davis company and indications located at several other points among the hills to the south.

About 25 years ago H. J. Davis, a New York chemist, who was interested in obtaining the mineral, owned a mine in the province of Quebec and showed samples from this mine in his New York office. A student at Amherst college who saw these specimens said he knew where there were extensive surface showings of the same thing in the town of Rowe. Mr. Davis lost no time in locating the place and purchased the land for the opening up of the immense ore body.

Three farms were included in his purchase, giving him about one and one-half miles on the strike of the vein, ample area to carry out the extensive undertaking he planned. Within three months he had a force of contractors and miners at work and the operations have been carried on day and night since.

At Clarendon—as serene and self-contained a village as can be found in New England, but constantly reminded of the world of commerce by the continuous passage of freight and passenger trains over the Boston & Maine railroad across the river—is the center of the mining region, so is its little hotel the focus of all the mining interest and enthusiasm thereabouts. In place of the occasional commercial travelers and chattering groups of townsmen, the little office, heated by a gigantic wood fire, is nightly crowded with men who have interests in or who work for the different properties, and who linger in front of the blazing logs in an earnest discussion of "strikes," possibilities of development, continuity of veins, amount of copper that may be found, etc.

ANGLO-FRENCH EXPO.

PLANS NOW MAKING FOR GREAT INDUSTRIAL SHOW.

Plans for the Grounds and Buildings Which Are to Be the Most Magnificent Ever Built for an Exposition.

The Franco-British exposition of 1908 is in the first stages of construction and in a year's time London will have the largest exhibition that has ever been held in Great Britain. It is to take up 140 acres of ground at Shepherd's Bush. Though essentially an industrial exhibition, it will of course have other interests, and we are promised in particular that the many phases of art will be prominent. For instance, there is the Indian Court and Lake which will confront visitors who enter by the principal entrance. This is to be an example of Indian architecture, brilliant in color and fantastic in shape. There will be two terraces running completely round the lake, a bridge across it, and piers jutting out from the sides into the water. At the far end of the lake, which will be trafficked by many boats, there is Congress Hall. Here meetings of all kinds will be held, and scientific and other societies invited to use it for conferences. At the back of Congress Hall there is to be a transparent cascade, lighted underneath and in front with colored lamps, which will play with picturesque effect at night. The designing of the buildings of which the exhibition committee has control is in the hands of Mr. Belcher, a former president of the Royal Society of British Architects, and M. Toudoire, who designed the Architectural Court of Esplanade des Invalides of the Paris exposition. There is to be a Fine Arts palace, in which a unique collection of British and French paintings, under the superintendence of Sir Isidore Spielmann, will be exhibited; an Applied Arts palace, an Ancient Art palace, and a building for decorative art. Finally, we may expect a good deal in original architecture from the various French and English towns or colonies which will house their wares of their own construction.

Our picture depicts a portion of the stadium for sports of every description. The arrangements here are in the hands of the British Olympic association, and as there are to be a cinder track, a motor-race track, a cycle track, a trotting-track—each separate—a swimming-bath and a large area of turf in the center, a tremendous programme will be possible.

Though the exhibition will probably run for only six months, every building will be of steel construction and fireproof. Running round the outskirts an elevated railway will carry passengers from point to point, and enable them to have an excellent view of the exhibition. Music and amusements will be almost as prominent as commercial competition, refreshments will possibly be more so, and an entente cordiale spirit will go a long way towards making the exhibition a success.

"Yep," replied the conductor. "We can't help it, though. You see, the car ahead is behind."

The foreigner's eyes opened wider. "Would you mind saying him again?" he asked apologetically.

"I say," replied the conductor, louder than before, "that the car ahead is behind. See?"

The foreigner returned to his seat. "Zee car-r-r ahead, he ees behind?" said he to himself. "Most wonderful, most astonishing, is zis country! I do not understand, but some day perhaps I shall."—Judge.

BIG PLAY HOUSE PLANNED FOR THE GROWING CITY

There is being projected the building of a big two story structure in Ada as a combination opera house natatorium and skating rink

Probably it will be built entirely by Ada capital. The plan is to build the swimming pool in the center of the ground floor and construct a commodious roller rink around the pool. The second floor would be occupied as an opera house, so arranged as to be comfortable summer or winter.

Such a place, kept clean would be a boon to the city also it should be a

paying proposition for unquestionably it would soon become the mecca of all seeking pleasure or recreation

Since Ada is growing now and soon will grow greater, such a playhouse and place for athletic pastime is fast becoming a necessity

HASKELL AND WILLIAMS ADA'S GUESTS SATURDAY

As was advertised during the week C N Haskell spoke at the court house Saturday night. His subject was "The Constitution."

It was quite a pleasant surprise to many when Delegate Bob Williams walked into the hall with Mr Haskell, he being here between trains enroute to Guthrie.

The two speakers were presented to the audience by Delegate Carlton Weaver in a few well chosen words complimenting each for their valuable work in the convention.

Mr Haskell was the first speaker and plunged at once into his subject. He had no prepared speech. He did not need one. He is so thoroughly familiar with the subject that there is not a sentence, sentence or clause which he can not talk about and explain fully.

His method of presenting it, and particularly with the Asp constitution the red light, makes conclusions so conclusive as to be an argument the republicans will never be able to meet. Among other things he said:

Some newspapers had kept standing in type the charge that the convention was enacting legislation and not making a constitution, using it day after day. He said not a constitution for twenty years had not been made which consisted of less than forty five pages, yet one editor claimed he could write it on a page and a half of paper. That editor would not know a constitution from "Beecher's Life of Christ" if he was to meet it in the road.

"There are three classes who think there is too much legislation in the constitution. First, the man who reads the newspapers and believes all they say; second, those who do not know, third, the railroad magnate who stood by and saw the lumber trust pinched the other day and wanted legislation stopped before his turn came."

"These are the three kinds of kickers against the constitution and I have not an apology to offer for a single line between the 'kickers' of that book."

Mr Haskell spoke about an hour and thirty minutes and gave a most excellent analysis of the constitution.

Delegate Bob Williams was next presented to the large audience and after paying a tribute to the "Young Rome" and the thriftiness of her citizens he spoke in general of the work of the convention. He was warmly received, as he always is when he visits Ada.

Mr Haskell is on a tour through the state defending the work of the convention and making votes for its ratification.

Mr Williams was enroute to Guthrie where he will join the editing committee in the final work on the constitution.

GREER COUNTY AGAIN SUES TO PREVENT DISMEMBERMENT

Delegate Carlton Weaver is today in receipt of official notice that he and all the other delegates to the constitutional convention have been again sued by the Greer county folk who resent the division of the county. March 28th is the day set for hearing on the application for injunctive relief.

The Greer county commissioners Saturday refuted their suit for injunction against the constitutional convention seeking to prevent the division of that county as contemplated in the constitution. The action was first brought a month ago in the Oklahoma supreme court and ruled out upon a decision that the supreme court was not of original jurisdiction to try injunction cases. The case this time comes up in the district court, Judge Burford presiding.

The supreme court did not pass upon the merits of the application, although it was known five of the seven judges presiding were of the opinion that the convention exceeded its authority in disturbing county lines in old Oklahoma other than it would have been incidental to the establishment of a state government. Judge Irwin dissented, holding the court had ample jurisdiction to pass upon the application. The new suit differs very little from the original cause. All members of the convention are named as defendants. Attorneys for Greer county are Charles Eakin, A R Garrett and A M Stewart all of Mangum, and Horace Speed of Guthrie. The petition alleges that the convention has disregarded the law in tampering with the county lines, they having been established by act of Congress, and sought to rob the people of Greer county of taxable property by an illegal and unwarranted assumption of authority in no wise delegated to or possessed by the convention, and by the flagrant usurpation of purely legislative power and functions, wholly foreign to the purposes for which it was called.

The petition also recites that once approved by the people and the president of the United States, no matter how illegal the convention's acts may be, they become fixed law, and Greer county would be without remedy whatever. The court's intervention is asked in the convention's submission of the question to the people. A separate suit will be filed against the supreme election board named in the convention's election ordinance.

WILL HAYES GROUND TO PIECES BY M. K. & T. ENGINE

The mangled body of Will R Hayes, a leading fullblood Indian of this county, was found on the M K & T track Saturday night at 8 40 o'clock after being crushed by the front trucks of the south bound local freight engine, No 563.

The unfortunate man, about an hour before the accident, was seen in town. It is thought he had started alone for the home of his cousin Daniel Hayes, or that of his uncle, Senator Amos Hayes, both of whom live southeast of town not far distant. When he had gone about 400 yards south of the station, supposedly overcome by drink he lay down across the track.

While switching down that way the engineer felt the engine strike some object. He says at the time they were going only three miles an hour, and both he and the fireman were looking back for signals. After backing up it was discovered a wheel had severed the cranium entirely from the body. Also the left arm was cut off, the left side horribly lacerated, and the toes of one foot crushed off. Soon after the gruesome discovery the body was identified and after inspection by officers was removed to an undertaker's establishment. The deceased until a few weeks ago, was living at Roff. He leaves a wife and two children. Being a member of the Odd Fellows, a large number of the membership of that order went out Sunday afternoon and conducted the funeral, which occurred in the Indian cemetery near Amos Hayes.

Millinery Magnificent.

The millinery store of Mrs W A Alexander, on the occasion of her opening Saturday, was a scene of beauty. Each show window was tastefully decorated, one in lavender and mauve with a gorgeous white pattern hat in the center, the other in rose color setting off superb offerings in street wear. Entering, one beheld a lovely profusion of pattern hats, trimmings, hand made creations, potted plants, bouquets and festoons of flowers—such a dazzling profusion as to baffle the pencil of a man reporter. All day long the store was the mecca of critical lovers of millinery.

Opportunity to furnish your home on easy payment is now "up" to you. If you do not take advantage of it you will make a mistake. A small cash payment, a small payment every week or every two weeks, just to suit your pay-day, and soon your home will be made happy by the comfort, convenience and beauty of new furnishings.

A Kitchen Cabinet is a great convenience and saves many a step and much labor. There is a place for 50 pounds of flour for meal, sugar, spices, etc., all right at hand. Price, Base and Top $12 50, $2 00 down and $2 00 per week or sold separately Base $6 50, Top $6 00 with payments reduced one-half.

A Kitchen Sale is an absolute necessity. We have them from $3.50 to $7.90, $1.00 down and $1.00 per week.

We again call attention to our Undertaking Department. Coffins, Caskets, Hearse, Embalmer and Undertaker, will, when requested, take complete charge of funeral.

Remember also our Second Hand department where we buy and sell second hand furniture and exchange NEW FOR OLD.

Also we sell Jap-a-lac which will renovate your old furniture at small expense. Bring us your wants. We will supply you.

SOME RAILROAD NOTES OF INTEREST TO THIS SECTION

Guthrie Ok, March 25 — An amended charter has been filed by the Choctaw, Newcastle and Western railroad, which proposes to build from Lawton via Ada to South McAlester with a belt around South McAlester and a branch line to Newcastle and Krebs. The estimated length is 200 miles and the cost $4,000,000. It is capitalized at $5,000,000. Lawton is the headquarters and the incorporators J R LeBasquet of Little Rock Ark., L C Rose and A W Underwood of Chicago, S T Pierson and W P Dix of Shawnee.

Denison Tex, March 25 — No more will the red-shirted section man be a picturesque figure along the line of the M K & T. Red shirts are tabooed for section men—by a general order which has been issued by General Superintendent E. M. Alvord of the Katy lines north of Denison. Mr Alvord says they are not to be worn and in future it will be worth a section foreman's job to allow one of his men to come to work wearing a passionate colored shirt. This order, it is believed, will cause riots and strikes where Mexicans are employed.

of the third district at Chaffee, Mo. In the first district parts of the central and southwestern divisions were cut off to form the new Red River division, which will be in charge of Superintendent J W. Walton, formerly superintendent of the Katy at Parsons, Kansas. The three divisions will be as follows under the new arrangement: Central Division—Monett to Red River via Fort Smith, Fayetteville, Ark., to Okmulgee, I. T., Bentonville, St Paul and Mansfield branches, headquarters, Fort Smith, Ark.

Southwestern Division—Monett to Red river via Lawton, headquarters, Sapulpa, I T.

Red River Division—Sapulpa, I T., to Red river via Francis, Hope, Ark., to Ardmore, I T., Sulphur branch and the Platter cut-off, headquarters, Francis, I T.

General Manager W C Nixon of the Frisco has announced a reorganization of operating divisions on the system, effective April 1. Under this change the new division, which will be known as the Red River division, will be under the first district, instead of under General Superintendent W B Drake of Fort Worth as has been rumored.

The system will be divided into three districts, general superintendents of the first and second districts will have headquarters at Springfield, Mo. and

Will H. Hart and C. E. Alleman of Huntington, Ind., stockholders in the Oklahoma Portland Cement Co., and friends of its president, A L Beck, are spending a few days in the city. They express themselves as highly pleased with Ada and with the progress and prospects of the big cement plant.

ADA, CHICKASAW NATION, INDIAN TERRITORY.

The biggest little city in the new commonwealth. The city that has never experienced either a boom or a blow. During its six years' life it has gradually grown into a commercial and railroad center of 4,600 population. The growth has been natural, solid, and enduring.

A big Portland cement plant with a pay roll of $3,500 per week, in process of construction; $40,000 worth of waterworks improvement, including a mammoth reservoir to furnish abundant water for factories.

Society excellent, good schools and strong churches; unsurpassed agricultural section; six railroad outlets; five more such outlets under contract to build by September, 1907, bonuses are raised.

Veritably Ada is a city built upon a rock, and it will stand. It is in the logical belt of various mineral resources. Court town for 16th Recording District and unquestionably a county seat under statehood.

Not a rival town within a radius of 40 miles. In a cotton country, but not DEPENDANT UPON cotton. Healthful climate; good water. Low taxes; real estate values reasonable, but rising. Ada is the place pre-eminent to live or invest in. Better get in on the ground floor before the skyscrapers come.

INDIAN OF MEXICO DOCTILE

Essentially a Man of Peace, He Wants to Be Let Alone.

The simple minded, patient, docile Indian of Mexico is eminently peaceful. Bountiful nature and perpetual summer combine to palliate his improvidence. He can not see the necessity of laying up anything for a rainy day. It rains half the days in Mexico anyhow, but that only makes the mangoes grow larger and cheaper. If he has no tortillas today some of his neighbors have, and they will gladly share, for conditions may be reversed tomorrow, says Modern Mexico.

These Mexican Indians make the best and the poorest servants in the world. Their greatest charm from this standpoint is their perfect appreciation of their position. Always polite, never presuming, with hat in hand, it is always "your servant" and "with your permission." In the household they ask a half holiday once a fortnight with never a word of complaint when working hours last from daylight to midnight.

The Mexican Indian does not want to fight. All he asks is to be let alone. His politeness and affectionate nature are inborn. His love for children is particularly marked. It is a common sight to see a laborer in the street with but two pieces of white cotton clothing to his back or his name stop a woman with a baby in her arms and holding the child's face between both his hands, deliver a resounding smack and chuck it under the chin. And in the same unconscious and entirely unaffected manner will a young man take his sombrero from his head and reverently kiss the hand of some ancient relative in a tattered dress when he encounters her in the crowded thoroughfare.

TWO OLD CRONIES CELEBRATE.

Have Their Own Way of Observing the Spirit of Christmas.

"For many years," said Mr. Frank L. Shafer, of Cincinnati, at the Arlington, "a couple of old cronies of my acquaintance have had a unique way of celebrating their friendship on Christmas day.

"Punctually at noon on December 24, they meet at a certain rendezvous and Bill opens the game by buying a quart of wine. When this is consumed Tom makes a purchase of a second quart, the drinking of which consumes much time, and the story of their years is told and retold.

"The finale, which is an act of great seriousness, consists of Bill going down into the depths of his trousers and pulling forth a $20 gold piece, which he presents to his chum as an evidence of sincere appreciation. Without the loss of a second Tom makes a dive for his pocket and extends to the other, a double eagle, accompanying the gift with fervent expressions of everlasting friendship. This quaint custom appears to be original with the principals of my story, and without going into detailed argument it would seem their plan is not altogether without merit."—Washington Herald.

Her Reason.

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

THE PROTRACTED MEETING.

One Hundred and Fifty Dollars Raised For Missions.

The protracted meeting at the Baptist church is in progress and the services of yesterday were interesting and well attended. On account of the meeting no other service in the city was held, and many were turned away for lack of room. The subject for the evening service was "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world." Rev. Harrell handled the subject well and one of the best sermons of the season resulted.

At the morning service a committee was named to request the business men to close their places at 7 p. m. in order that they and their clerks might attend the evening services.

At the morning service a mission collection was taken which amounted to $150.

A singer has been engaged and is expected to arrive on tomorrow. Everybody is urged to attend the meeting and assist in the services.

The News' Father Here.

H. H. Weaver of Mt. Vernon, Texas, father of Otis B. and Carlton, gave his sons a delightful surprise Monday morning early by dropping in on them without notice. Naturally today the boys are not noticing anything much except their father.

Notably a man of impulses—good impulses—after conducting the Sunday school yesterday, of which he has been superintendent something like a third of a century, he resolved to come to see his boys. In the Southern army he learned to be a minute man, so at once he boarded the East Texas train. Also in the Southern army he learned many of the good impulses which have in a myriad ways characterized his mature years.

The News affectionately welcomes the father.

PRAISE FOR TERRELL.

His Old Home Folks Commend Him to Pontotoc County.

Below is published a comment on Joel Terrell's candidacy for county judge of Pontotoc, as it appears in the Paris (Tex.) Morning News, a leading paper in the county where Mr. Terrell was reared:

"We notice in a recent issue of the Ada (I.T.) Evening News the announcement of Joel Terrell, an old Lamar county boy, as a candidate for county judge of Pontotoc county in the new state of Oklahoma. We trust Joel's aspirations may be realized in this instance, and that he may climb even higher up the ladder of success. Born and reared in this county, a son of an old and highly respected family, the son of an ex-Confederate soldier, largely self-made and self-educated, a clean, honorable young man, he is the very type of men who should be the political leaders in a new commonwealth, made up by the blending of Southern and Western people. Joel received his early education in our common country schools, took an academic course in Whitewright college, alternately teaching school and attending college, in order to work his way through the pay-as-you-go plan. He afterwards took a law course at the University of Texas, graduating in the class of 1902, and locating in Paris, where he practiced law for three or four years. His conduct here both as a lawyer and as a man was above reproach, and he took high rank among the younger members of our bar. Unlike many adventurers who flock to a new country—men who flee from their shady deeds in other sections—Joel Terrell's life has been an open book in our midst—a record of honorable living. We feel that the people of his adopted home will make no mistake in electing him to the responsible office of county judge."

Mr. Johnson Smashed Some More

When The News wrote up, Saturday afternoon, the visit of Mr. Johnson, the government liquor smasher, Mr. Johnson was not yet through with the town. Later he visited the drug stores and in one of them found some patent medicines whose manufacturers had put in more preservative alcohol than would pass his critical judgment. Accordingly he held a little smashing bee and the air in the store's rear was for a long time heavy with medicinal odors.

Mrs. Brooks at Home.

Following the action of Judge Dickerson in allowing bail to Mrs. Mary E. Brooks, accused of murdering Dr. Davenport, the required $1,000 bond was readily furnished by well known Ada men.

Saturday afternoon she was released from the U. S. jail at Ardmore and came immediately to Ada. She was accompanied by her father, R. E. Blye, who lives near Stigler, I. T. She has returned to her home at Francis with the avowed intention of going to her husband at Batesville, Ark.

The accused woman still stoutly protests her innocence; says she has nothing to fear, nor anything to regret save the humiliating exposure of her criminal intimacy with the dead physician, the shame of which must eventually be known to her children.

Public opinion touching the tragedy is much divided, not only among those informed solely by hearsay, but also among the officers and other people who visited the scene of the tragedy. Those who believe in the woman's innocence think investigators of the crime jumped too far to conclusions, assuming too much from the past relations of the woman and the physician. Some think those suspicious tracks of two men leading southward from the scene of the killing were not investigated sufficiently.

With the passing of the days the mystery seems to intensify, and a satisfactory hypothesis more becomes difficult to arrive at.

Exceptionally Good Attraction.
"A Royal Slave," the attraction at the opera house Saturday night, was up against it in the way of a crowd. Perhaps the advanced prices scared some away, but no doubt the slim attendance was chiefly attributable to a big political gathering at the court house, and to other gatherings in the city.

But it is just to say those who failed to go missed a theatrical treat of a character that seldom is afforded an Ada audience. Scarcely was there a weak figure in the cast, indeed the bulk of the company was exceptionally strong.

The play is a story of old Mexico, with a touch of the historical, bristling with tropical tragedy, aglow with tropical love and pathos—at all times gorgeous in tropical color.

While all three of the ladies in the cast are to be praised, the work of Marie Van Tassel, as the countess, was notably fine. Her's is a very heavy part in which she is swayed by terrific storms of conflicting passions.

Possibly this company will be secured for a return engagement, in which case no doubt they will be greeted by a crowded house.

Ill-Gotten Gains Are of Small Avail in Days of Misfortune

Retributive Fate that has overtaken Members of the Clark Street Gang of Gamblers and Bunco Men of which Mike McDonald was Chief.

Chicago — The papers announce that "Mike" McDonald, the chief of the Clark street gang of gamblers, is on the verge of collapse from the effects of the trouble that has come to him in his old age. His third wife is in jail for the murder of Webster Quinn, the lover whose coldness drove her to insane jealousy and desperation. His second wife according to the news dispatches is dying in New Jersey. Traveling on the shady side of 60 McDonald faces physical breakdown and old age in which his ill-gotten dollars must be his only comfort.

Not long ago Al Adams, millionaire policy king of New York, committed suicide after serving a term in prison for obnoxiousness. He still had a fortune, and his family was suffering the social stigma of the father's continued life in a brownstone palace. But his dollars gave Al Adams no comfort in his old age.

Twenty-five years ago there flourished in Chicago the Clark street gambling game, with McDonald at its head. This crowd made a chapter of history, but it is not the limit of history that is written to books recording the city's growth. First of all, it is to be found in the records of the police and in the memories of men whose business brought them into contact with the members of the gang.

Misery in Polluted Cash

Not only was McDonald the member of this lot who retired from gambling with the most money, but he was the one whose career after he had quit gambling seemed to refute the argument that money which is not only tainted but thoroughly polluted cannot bring happiness. Now that the tragic chapter of the murder of his lover by his wife has been added even the seeming refutation of McDonald's career has been destroyed. The fate of the rest of the crowd gives abundant evidence that the mills of the gods grind just as fine in these days as of old.

John Deming, one of the well-known Clark street figures in the days when that street was known from coast to coast on account of its vice, became a pauper and died.

Bob McDonald, alias Kistler Bob, is now a tramp in New York, a plain man financially except McDonald himself was Patrick Casey who had charge of the bar. Casey saved his money and died a few years ago fairly well off.

Others Pursued by Fate

James Papes, who was a thief as well as a gambler, broke into the treasury of Springfield and died after fleeing to Canada to escape the penalties of his crime.

Jimmy Carroll, another of the crowd that alternated gambling with stealing, and who made the police a world of trouble, continued his outlaw career until he died seven years ago in about poverty.

Joseph Lewis, alias Hungry Joe, is said to have renounced his former ways, is making in honest living and is doing better than most of the men he formerly associated with.

Jimmy Hovey, one of the most notorious denizens of Clark street in the wild open days and a gambler who stole into a fight with Al Adams, a barkeeper in the saloon of Count Riley in Clark street and shot and killed him. He was tried and acquitted.

Most of the gambling men who committed murder in Clark street in those days were afflicted in fact owing to the strength of the law and the courts. Hovey's attorney married Mollie Holbrook, the widow of Buck Holbrook, a gambler who was killed at Hennepin. Hovey and his wife went to Europe and have not been heard of in Chicago since.

Reign of the Bunco Men

Clark street became infamous for the bunco game in the days of the McDonald crowd as for gambling. The bunco-steerers were gamblers and the gamblers or many of them were bunco-steerers. Harry Lawrence was one of the best known of the bunco men. Before McDonald became known as the gambler king of the city he was strongly interested in the bunco game.

In brief the bunco game was operated in this way. The steerers were dressed and suave, sought their prey in the hotels principally. Steerer No. 1 accosted the stranger, called him by name that happened to occur to him. The prospective victim eyed the stranger with suspicion and told him stranger's town, and told him a string of boyhood happenings that never happened, but which the prospective victim could not dispute.

"By the way," steerer No. 2 would say, "I bought a ticket in a lottery the other day. Let's drop into the lottery office and see if I won anything."

There were a number of these "of fleas." A prosperous looking man sat at the desk and the walls were covered with fake lists and reports of lottery drawings. In front of the man at the desk was a big glittering pile of gold coin. The ticket was presented. Baiting the Sharp Trap.

You are lucky, said the man at the desk to steerer No. 2. You have won $2,500."

The cash was paid over to steerer No. 2 while the eyes of the county man bulged at the sight of so much easy money. That was the beginning. The victim was told there were drawings every day. Usually he bought a ticket, but no matter whether he did or not the steerer stuck close to him and spent money on him principally for liquor. They would turn to the lottery office, and after some talk between the manager and the steerer the latter would agree to bet against a card game. Always he was lucky and sometimes he won large amounts. It became a comparatively easy matter to draw the victim or county man into the betting. As soon as he had lost all the bunco man thought he had with him he was second out of the place and the lot

His finish came quicker than that of many of his associates, for he was stabbed by George Russell, alias White Five a bunco man. Russell acquired his alias from the fact that he came to Chicago from White Pine, Nev. He was a fighting man of the western type but was acquitted in his trial for the stabbing of Sir James Jere Dunn in the Street.

But best known of all, not excepting McDonald himself was Jere Dunn, slayer of "Jimmy" Elliott, the heavy-weight prize fighter. Clark street during the reign of McDonald was the Mecca of many crooks, gamblers, confidence men, bad men and other classes of disreputables, but no figure ever appeared in the street who by force of his all-around wickedness, commanded the attention that Jere Dunn got. Even Dunn's friends did not claim for him any degree of morality. Some of them say that he was square with his partners in crime, but his history disproves even that contention. One of the men who knew him best says that Dunn never knew what physical fear was. If this was true it is about all the good that can be said of him, even after his death. Dunn died in New Jersey last year of malignant cancer. Wherever he went he made criminal history and some of it is worth retelling in any narrative of the Clark street crowd. This notorious character made his appearance in Clark street in the early 80s. The vicious atmosphere of the

A DOWN EAST MINE.

COPPER DEPOSIT BEING WORKED IN WESTERN MASSACHUSETTS.

Thriving Small Mining Community
Which Is Doing Business in
Hoosac Hills — Looks Like
Western Mining Camp.

One would not naturally look for a copper mine in old Massachusetts, but such is one of the surprises one would meet with in traveling through the Hoosac hills in the valley of the Deerfield, for there would be found a mining community which looks for all like a western mining camp, barring, perhaps, the saloons and the gambling places and might be appropriately called the Leadville of New England.

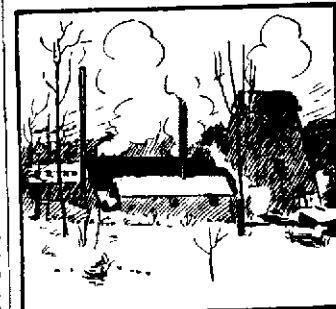

A well defined mineral belt appears in the hills of southern Vermont and continues, with varying richness of surface showings, across the state of Massachusetts to the south some say as far as Virginia. Whatever may be its extent, there certainly is ample evidence of no little wealth underground, but the great problem is to find the best points where it may be extracted at a maximum of profit—the same old problem that dominates the search for gold, silver, copper and iron wherever they exist and on the successful solution of which depends the development of satisfactory mining properties.

Mining is not new in Chatham and its vicinity but a boom like the present one is distinctly new there. For nearly a quarter of a century the largest pyrites mine in the United States has been profitably operated in the little settlement of Davis in the town of Rowe, just to the northwest of Chatham, but better known in connection with the latter town because Chatham is the point of shipment for ore to concerns throughout the state east of the Mississippi.

The great vein of pyrites—the large known deposits in the world out side of Spain—is a part of the mineral belt which cuts across Massachusetts just east of the main Hoosac range. Where there is an immense body of pyrites it is generally safe to assume that copper as well exists and it has been found to be the case in this instance several pockets having been discovered in the pyrites dump of the Davis company and indications located at several other points among the hills to the south.

About 25 years ago H. J. Davis, a New York chemist, who was interested in obtaining the mineral, owned a mine in the province of Quebec and showed samples from this mine in his New York office. A student at Amherst college who saw these specimens said he knew where there were extensive surface showings of the same thing in the town of Rowe. Mr. Davis lost no time in locating the place and purchased the land for the opening up of the immense ore body.

Three farms were included in his purchase, giving him about one and one-half miles on the strike of the vein ample area to carry out the extensive undertaking he planned. Within three months he had a force of contractors and miners at work and the operations have been carried on day and night since.

At Chatham—as serene and self-contained a village as can be found in New England but constantly reminded of the world of commerce by the continuous passage of freight and passenger trains over the Boston & Maine railroad across the river—is the center of the mining region so its little hotel the focus of all the mining interest and enthusiasm thereabouts. In place of the occasional commercial travelers and chattering groups of townsmen the little office, headed by a gigantic wood fire is nightly crowded with men who have interests in or who work for the different properties and who linger in front of the blazing logs in an earnest discussion of strikes, possibilities of development, continuity of veins, amount of copper that may be found, etc.

ANGLO-FRENCH EXPO.

PLANS NOW MAKING FOR GREAT INDUSTRIAL SHOW.

Plans for the Grounds and Buildings
Which Are to Be the Most Magnificent Ever Built for an Exposition

The Franco-British exposition of 1904 is in the first stages of construction and in a year's time London will have the largest exhibition that has ever been held in Great Britain. It is to take up 140 acres of ground at Shepherd's Bush. Though essentially an industrial exhibition it will of course have other interests and we are promised in particular that the many phases of it will be prominent. For instance, there is the Indian Court and Lake which will confront visitors.

View of Entrance To and Part of Stadium Where Olympic Sports Will Be Held.

who enter by the principal entrance. This is to be an example of Indian architecture, brilliant in color and fantastic in shape. There will be two terraces running completely round the lake, a bridge across it and piers jutting out from the sides into the water. At the far end of the lake which will be trafficked by many boats, there is Congress Hall. It is met ings of all kinds will be held and scientific and other societies invited to use it for conferences. At the back of Congress Hall there is to be a transparent cascade lighted underneath and in front with colored lamps, which will play with picturesque effect at night. The designing of the buildings of which the exhibition committee has control is in the hands of Mr. Belcher, a former president of the Royal Society of British Architects, and M. Tondore, who designed the Architectural Court of Esplanade des Invalides of the Paris exposition. There is to be a Fine Arts palace, in which a unique collection of British and French paintings under the superintendence of Sir Isidore Spielmann will be exhibited an Applied Arts palace, an Ancient Art palace, and a building for decorative art. Finally, we may expect a good deal in original architecture from the various French and English towns or colonies which will house their wares of their own construction.

Our picture depicts a portion of the stadium for sports of every description. The arrangements here are in the hands of the British Olympic association and as there are to be a cycle track, a motor race track, a cycling track, a trotting track—each separate—a swimming bath and a large area of turf in the center a tremendous programme will be possible.

Though the exhibition will probably run for only six months, every building will be of steel construction and fireproof. Running round the outskirts an elevated railway will carry passengers from point to point, and enable them to have an excellent view of the exhibition. Music and amusements will be almost as prominent as commercial competition refreshments will possibly be more so and an extensive cordial spirit will go a long way towards making the exhibition a success.

Yep, replied the conductor. We can't help it though. You see the car ahead is behind.

The foreigner's eyes opened wide. "Would you mind saying him again?" he asked apologetically.

Tragic Finish of the Hankins

Jeff and Al Hankins opened a gambling house at 124 Clark street. Al afterward bought a stock farm in Indiana, expecting to settle down and get away from the life he had led. Not long afterward he was found suffocated to death in a folding bed. An investigation was made, but it was stopped when it was found that to pursue it would destroy at least one reputation. Jeff Hankins dropped dead of heart disease about ten years ago. No name was better known in Clark street in the wide open days than that of Hankins. Grease was the prey of all the hoodlums, politicians in the county—and there were more of them then than now—and was intimately associated with the hoodlums in the county bond. He is said to have furnished the largest part of the fund of $100,000 which was futilely spent in trying to have pass laws legalizing pool, selling on race tracks.

Garritya Were Fighting Men

Then there were the Garrity brothers, John Hugh and Mike. They were an especially tough trio and known as fighting men. They were guilty of numerous assaults, some of them of the most serious character. It was John Garrity who hit in an off of Alderman James Peasey who was also a gambler. The men had engaged in a fight and in the absence of more deadly weapons Garrity used his teeth on the part of the alderman's arm, that was most convenient. Hugh and Mike Garrity are dead, having fallen into poverty and the same old fortune told period most of their fellows. On one occasion also the Garrity brothers in the course of a gambler's feud with John Dowling who ran a rival establishment proceeded to beat Dowling up in a fight. Dowling was one of the characters of the old Clark street that was at once one of the best and one of the worst. He was brutal and often beat men with the butt of the big revolver he carried for no stronger apparent reason than a desire to see them fall. At the same time he was generous to the unfortunate and as a result had many of the most bitter enemies and a great many staunch friends. Dowling lost his money after Clark street was closed to the big gamblers and died of paresis five years ago.

Acquitted of the Crime

Further than Mill was streets of Chicago and the trial was of interest to all. But the jury acquitted Dunn on the count of manslaughter. At which Dunn went east, became interested in race horses through the gift of an uncle, then through a woman, and soon became one of the prominent owners of the circuit. He actually was driven out of Chicago because the authorities who in those days took a must everything that was bad, decided that Dunn was too disreputable and dangerous to even let stay in the city. In his declining years he fell back on his power over women and married a much younger woman than himself who had more money than he.

Thus his death of poverty overtook most of the old Clark street crowd. In many cases it was both. In some instances, as in the case of McDonald, health and fortune have been left but fate has placed him in a less acceptable than death or destitution.

In this later day misfortune seems to follow the men who have accumulated vast fortunes of tainted money. The old Clark street money was polluted and the misfortunes of the old crowd seem greater than those of the owners of tainted money.

Does none, is big misfortune in proportion to the depth of the taint it carries?

street was intense in the nostrils of Dunn. In 1887 he got into a fight with Jimmy Hovey, a thief and gambler, who shot him in the groin. Hovey refused to appear as a witness Dunn who the case came up for trial.

The Killing of Elliott

Elliott, with the professional pursuer, Hubert was in Atlantic City, looking for a fight. On the evening of March 1, 1888, when Dunn entered from this point in the story there is a wide divergence in the alleged facts. Dunn always vain and always boastful gave a version to the effect that he was attacked by Elliott and fought him singlehanded for half an hour after eleven o'clock had struck. Elliott was more than six feet tall and a giant in strength. But Elliott he shot his enemy only after the latter had forced him to the floor and was holding a cocked revolver as near his breast. The other side of the story is that Dunn entered the fight and Elliott, sitting at a table and without warning and without time, shot him in the chest.

Accused of the Crime

Further than Mill was streets of Chicago and the trial was of interest to all. But the jury acquitted Dunn on the count of manslaughter. At which Dunn went east, became interested in race horses through the gift of an uncle, then through a woman, and soon became one of the prominent owners of the circuit. BIG PLAY HOUSE PLANNED FOR THE GROWING CITY

There is being projected the building of a big two story structure in Ada as a combination opera house natatorium and skating rink

Probably it will be built entirely by Ada capital. The plan is to build the swimming pool in the center of the ground floor and construct a commodious roller rink around the pool. The second floor would be occupied as an opera house, so arranged as to be comfortable summer or winter

paving proposition for unquestionably it would soon become the mecca of all seeking pleasure or recreation

Since Ada is growing now and soon will grow greater, such a playhouse and place for athletic pastime is fast becoming a necessity

HASKELL AND WILLIAMS ADA'S GUESTS SATURDAY

As was advertised during the week C N Haskell spoke at the court house Saturday night. His subject was "The Constitution."

It was quite a pleasant surprise to many when Delegate Bob Williams walked into the hall with Mr Haskell, he being here between trains enroute to Guthrie.

The two speakers were presented to the audience by Delegate Carlton Weaver in a few well chosen words complimenting each for their valuable work in the convention.

Mr Haskell was the first speaker and plunged at once into his subject. He had no prepared speech. He did not need one. He is so thoroughly familiar with the subject that there is not a section, sentence or clause which he can not talk about and explain fully. His method of presenting it, and particularly with the Asp constitution the red light, makes conclusions so conclusive as to be an argument the republicans will never be able to meet. Among other things he said:

Some newspapers had kept standing in type the charge that the convention was enacting legislation and not making a constitution, using it day after day. He said not a constitution for twenty years had not been made which consisted of less than forty five pages, yet one editor claimed he could write it on a page and a half of paper. That editor would not know a constitution from 'Beecher's Life of Christ' if he was to meet it in the road.

"There are three classes who think there is too much legislation in the constitution. First, the man who reads the newspapers and believes all they say; second, those who do not know; third, the railroad magnate who stood by and saw the lumber trust pinched the other day and wanted legislation stopped before his turn came."

"These are the three kinds of kickers against the constitution and I have not an apology to offer for a single line between the 'kickers' of that book."

Mr Haskell spoke about an hour and thirty minutes and gave a most excellent analysis of the constitution.

Delegate Bob Williams was next presented to the large audience and after paying a tribute to the "Young Rome" and the thriftiness of her citizens he spoke in general of the work of the convention. He was warmly received, as he always is when he visits Ada.

Mr Haskell is on a tour through the state defending the work of the convention and making votes for its ratification.

Mr Williams was enroute to Guthrie where he will join the editing committee in the final work on the constitution.

GREER COUNTY AGAIN SUES TO PREVENT DISMEMBERMENT

Delegate Carlton Weaver is today in receipt of official notice that he and all the other delegates to the constitutional convention have been again sued by the Greer county folk who resent division of the county. March 25th is the day set for hearing on the application for injunctive relief.

The Greer county commissioners Saturday refuted their suit for injunction against the constitutional convention seeking to prevent the division of that county as contemplated in the constitution. The action was first brought a month ago in the Oklahoma supreme court and ruled out upon a decision that the supreme court was not of original jurisdiction to try injunction cases. The case this time comes up in the district court, Judge Burford presiding.

The supreme court did not pass upon the merits of the application, although it was known five of the seven judges presiding were of the opinion that the convention exceeded its authority in disturbing county lines in old Oklahoma other than it would have been incidental to the establishment of a state government. Judge Irwin dissented, holding the court had ample jurisdiction to pass upon the application. The new suit differs very little from the original cause. All members of the convention are named as defendants. Attorneys for Greer county are Charles Egan, A R Garrett and A M Stewart all of Mangum, and Horace Speed of Guthrie.

The petition alleges that the convention has disregarded the law in tampering with the county lines, they having been established by act of Congress, and sought to rob the people of Greer county of taxable property by an illegal and unwarranted assumption of authority in no wise delegated to or possessed by the convention, and by the flagrant usurpation of purely legislative power and functions, wholly foreign to the purposes for which it was called.

The petition also recites that once approved by the people and the president of the United States, no matter how illegal the convention's acts may be, they become fixed law, and Greer county would be without remedy whatever. The court's intervention is asked in the convention's submission of the question to the people. A separate suit will be filed against the supreme election board named in the convention's election ordinance.

WILL HAYES GROUND TO PIECES BY M. K. & T. ENGINE

The mangled body of Will R. Hayes, a leading fullblood Indian of this county, was found on the M K & T track Saturday night at 8:40 o'clock after being crushed by the front trucks of the south bound local freight engine, No 563.

The unfortunate man, about an hour before the accident, was seen in town. It is thought he had started alone for the home of his cousin Daniel Hayes, or that of his uncle, Senator Amos Hayes, both of whom live southeast of town not far distant. When he had gone about 400 yards south of the station, supposedly overcome by drink he lay down across the track.

While switching down that way the engineer felt the engine strike some object. He says at the time they were going only three miles an hour, and both he and the fireman were looking back for signals. After backing up it was discovered a wheel had severed the cranium entirely from the body. Also the left arm was cut off, the left side horribly lacerated, and the toes of one foot crushed off. Soon after the gruesome discovery the body was identified and after inspection by officers was removed to an undertaker's establishment.

The deceased until a few weeks ago, was living at Roff. He leaves a wife and two children. Being a member of the Odd Fellows, a large number of the membership of that order went out Sunday afternoon and conducted the funeral, which occurred in the Indian cemetery near Amos Hayes.

Millinery Magnificent.

The millinery store of Mrs W A Alexander, on the occasion of her opening Saturday, was a scene of beauty. Each show window was tastefully decorated, one in lavender and mauve with a gorgeous white pattern hat in the center, the other in rose color setting off superb offerings in street wear. Entering, one beheld a lovely profusion of pattern hats, trimmings, hand made creations, potted plants, bouquets and festoons of flowers—such a dazzling profusion as to baffle the pencil of a man reporter.

All day long the store was the mecca of critical lovers of millinery.

Opportunity to furnish your home on easy payment is now "up" to you. If you do not take advantage of it you will make a mistake. A small cash payment, a small payment every week or every two weeks, just to suit your pay-day, and soon your home will be made happy by the comfort, convenience and beauty of new furnishings.

A Kitchen Cabinet is a great convenience and saves many a step and much labor. There is a place for 50 pounds of flour for meal, sugar, spices, etc., all right at hand. Price, Base and Top $12.50, $2.00 down and $2.00 per week or sold separately Base $6.50, Top $6.00 with payments reduced one-half.

A Kitchen Sale is an absolute necessity. We have them from $3.50 to $7.00, $1.00 down and $1.00 per week.

We again call attention to our Undertaking Department. Coffins, Caskets, Hearse, Embalmer and Undertaker, who will, when requested, take complete charge of funeral.

Remember also our Second Hand department where we buy and sell second hand furniture and exchange NEW FOR OLD. Also we sell Jap-a-lac which will renovate your old furniture at small expense.

Bring us your wants. We will supply you.

SOME RAILROAD NOTES OF INTEREST TO THIS SECTION

Guthrie Ok, March 25.—An amended charter has been filed by the Choctaw, Newcastle and Western railroad, which proposes to build from Lawton via Ada to South McAlester with a belt around South McAlester and a branch line to Newcastle and Krebs. The estimated length is 200 miles and the cost $4,000,000. It is capitalized at $5,000,000. Lawton is the headquarters and the incorporators J R LeBasquet of Little Rock Ark., L C Rose and A W Underwood of Chicago, S T Pierson and W P Dix of Shawnee.

Denison Tex, March 25.—No more will the red-shirted section man be a picturesque figure along the line of the M K & T. Red shirts are tabooed for section men by a general order which has been issued by General Superintendent E. M. Alvord of the Katy lines north of Denison. Mr Alvord says they are not to be worn and in future it will be worth a section foreman's job to allow one of his men to come to work wearing a passionate colored shirt. This order, it is believed, will cause riots and strikes where Mexicans are employed.

The order was issued because an engineer mistook a red flag for a section man's shirt and almost got into trouble. The engineer cleared himself, but it was the death knell of the red shirt.

General Manager W C Nixon of the Frisco has announced a reorganization of operating divisions on the system, effective April 1. Under this change the new division, which will be known as the Red River division, will be under the first district, instead of under General Superintendent W B Drake of Fort Worth as has been rumored.

The system will be divided into three districts: general superintendents of the first and second districts will have headquarters at Springfield, Mo. and of the third district at Chaffee, Mo.

In the first district parts of the central and southwestern divisions were cut off to form the new Red River division, which will be in charge of Superintendent J W. Walton, formerly superintendent of the Katy at Parsons, Kansas. The three divisions will be as follows under the new arrangement:

Central Division—Monett to Red River via Fort Smith, Fayetteville, Ark., to Okmulgee, I. T., Bentonville, St. Paul and Mansfield branches, headquarters, Fort Smith, Ark.

Southwestern Division—Monett to Red river via Lawton, headquarters, Sapulpa, I. T.

Red River Division—Sapulpa, I. T., to Red river via Francis, Hope, Ark., to Ardmore, I. T., Sulphur branch and the Platter cut-off, headquarters, Francis, I. T.

Sam Martin Back.

Sam M. Martin returned Saturday after a month's absence. He and his mother visited his brother out in the Abilene country of West Texas. Mr. Martin reports that section in a most prosperous condition.

Later he was summoned to Hailyville, I. T., by the sickness of his little girl, who, we regret to say, died several days ago.

Indiana Visitors.

Will H. Hart and C. E. Alleman of Huntington, Ind., stockholders in the Oklahoma Portland Cement Co., and friends of its president, A. L. Beck, are spending a few days in the city. They express themselves as highly pleased with Ada and with the progress and prospects of the big cement plant.

G W Bradley left today for Dallas after spending two weeks in this section probing the business world in the interest of Bradstreet's.

The biggest little city in the new commonwealth. The city that has never experienced either a boom or a blow. During its six years' life it has gradually grown into a commercial and railroad center of 4,600 population. The growth has been natural, solid, and enduring.

A big Portland cement plant with a pay roll of $3,500 per week, in process of construction, $40,000 worth of waterworks improvement, including a mammoth reservoir to furnish abundant water for factories

Society excellent, good schools and strong churches, unsurpassed agricultural section, six railroad outlets, five more such outlets under contract to build by September, 1907, bonuses are raised

is a city built upon a rock, and it will stand. It is in the logical belt of various mineral resources. Court town for 18th Recording District and unquestionably a county seat under statehood. Not a rival town within a radius of 40 miles. In a cotton country, but not dependent upon cotton. Healthful climate, good water. Low taxes, real estate values reasonable, but rising. Ada is the place pre-eminent to live or invest in. Better get in on the ground floor before the skyscrapers come.

INDIAN OF MEXICO DOGIE

Essentially a Man of Peace, He Wants to Be Let Alone.

The simple minded, patient, docile Indian of Mexico is eminently peaceful. Bountiful nature and perpetual summer combine to palliate his improvidence. He can not see the necessity of laying up anything for a rainy day. It rains half the days in Mexico anyhow, but that only makes the mangoes grow larger and cheaper. If he has no tortillas today some of his neighbors have and they will gladly share for conditions may be reversed tomorrow, says Modern Mexico.

These Mexican Indians make the best and the poorest servants in the world. Their greatest charm from this standpoint is their perfect appreciation of their position. Always polite never presuming, with hat in hand it is always "your servant" and with your palms on. In the house hold they ask a holiday once a fortnight with never a word of complaint when working hours last from daylight to midnight.

The Mexican Indian does not want to fight. All he wants is to be let alone. His politeness and affectionate nature are inherent. This love for children is particularly marked. It is a common sight to see a father in the street with but two pieces of white cotton clothing to his back or his name stop a woman with a baby in her arms and holding the child's face between both his hands, deliver a long monologue and chuck under the chin. And in the same unobtrusive and entirely unaffectionate manner will a young man take his sunburnt hand to his head and reverently kiss the hand of some ancient relative in a tattered dress when he encounters her in the crowded thoroughfare.

TWO OLD CRONIES CELEBRATE.

Have Their Own Way of Observing the Spirit of Christmas.

"For many years," said Mr. Frank L. Shafer of Cincinnati at the Arlington, a couple of old cronies of my acquaintance have had a unique way of celebrating their friendship on Christmas day.

Punctually at noon on December 24 they meet at a certain rendezvous and Bill opens the game by buying a quart of wine. When this is consumed Tom makes a purchase of a second quart, the drinking of which consumes much time and the story of their years is told and retold.

The finale which is an act of great seriousness consists of Bill going down into the depths of his trousers and pulling forth a $20 gold piece which he presents to his chum as an evidence of sincere appreciation. Without the loss of a second Tom makes a dive for his pocket and extends to the other, a double eagle accompanying the gift with fervent expressions of everlasting friendship. This quaint custom appears to be original with the principals of my story and without going into detailed argument it would seem their plan is not altogether without merit.—Washington Herald

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and thus, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

THE PROTRACTED MEETING.

One Hundred and Fifty Dollars Raised For Missions.

The protracted meeting at the Baptist church is in progress and the services of yesterday were interesting and well attended. On account of the meeting no other service in the city was held, and many were turned away for lack of room. The subject for the evening service was "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world." Rev. Harrell handled the subject well and one of the best sermons of the season resulted.

At the morning service a committee was named to request the business men to close their places at 7 p. m. in order that they and their clerks might attend the evening services.

At the morning service a collection was taken which amounted to $150.

A singer has been engaged and is expected to arrive on tomorrow. Everybody is urged to attend the meeting and assist in the services.

The News' Father Here.

H. H. Weaver of Mt. Vernon, Texas, father of Oris B. and Carlton, gave his sons a delightful surprise Monday morning early by dropping in on them without notice. Naturally today the boys are not noticing anything much except their father.

Notably a man of impulses—good impulses—after conducting the Sunday school yesterday, of which he has been superintendent something like a third of a century, he resolved to come to see his boys. In the Southern army he learned to be a minute man, so at once he boarded the East Texas train. Also in the Southern army he learned many of the good impulses which have in a myriad ways characterized his mature years.

The News affectionately welcomes the father.

PRAISE FOR TERRELL.

His Old Home Folks Commend Him to Pontotoc County.

Below is published a comment on Joel Terrell's candidacy for county judge of Pontotoc, as it appears in the Paris (Tex.) Morning News, a leading paper in the county where Mr. Terrell was reared:

"We notice in a recent issue of the Ada (I. T.) Evening News the announcement of Joel Terrell, an old Lamar county boy, as a candidate for county judge of Pontotoc county in the new state of Oklahoma. We trust Joel's aspirations may be realized in this instance, and that he may climb even higher up the ladder of success. Born and reared in this county, a son of an old and highly respected family, the son of an ex-Confederate soldier, largely self-made and self-educated, a clean, honorable young man, he is the very type of men who should be the political leaders in a new commonwealth, made up by the blending of Southern and Western people. Joel received his early education in our common country schools, took an academic course in Whitworth college, alternately teaching school and attending college, in order to work his way through the pay-as-you-go plan. He afterwards took a law course at the University of Texas, graduating in the class of 1902, and teaching in Paris, where he practiced law for three or four years. His conduct here both as a lawyer and as a man was above reproach, and he took high rank among the younger members of our bar. Unlike many adventurers who flock to a new country—men who flee from their shady deeds in other sections—Joel Terrell's life has been an open book in our midst—a record of honorable living. We feel that the people of his adopted home will make no mistake in electing him to the responsible office of county judge."

Mr. Johnson Smashed Some More.

When The News wrote up, Saturday afternoon, the visit of Mr. Johnson, the government liquor smasher, Mr. Johnson was not yet through with the town. Later he visited the drug stores and in one of them found some patent medicines whose manufacturers had put in more preservative alcohol than would pass his critical judgment. Accordingly he held a little smashing bee and the air in the store's rear was for a long time heavy with medicinal odors.

Mrs. Brooks at Home.

Following the action of Judge Dickerson in allowing bail to Mrs. Mary E. Brooks, accused of murdering Dr. Davenport, the required $1,000 bond was readily furnished by well known Ada men.

Saturday afternoon she was released from the U. S. jail at Ardmore and came immediately to Ada. She was accompanied by her father, R. E. Blye, who lives near Stigler, I. T. She has returned to her home at Francis with the avowed intention of going to her husband at Batesville, Ark.

The accused woman still stoutly protests her innocence; says she has nothing to fear, nor anything to regret save the humiliating exposure of her criminal intimacy with the dead physician, the shame of which must eventually be known to her children.

Public opinion touching the tragedy is much divided, not only among those informed solely by hearsay, but also among the officers and other people who visited the scene of the tragedy. Those who believe in the woman's innocence think investigators of the crime jumped too far to conclusions, assuming too much from the past relations of the woman and the physician. Some think those suspicious tracks of two men heading southward from the scene of the killing were not investigated sufficiently.

With the passing of the days the mystery seems to intensify, and a satisfactory hypothesis more becomes difficult to arrive at.

Exceptionally Good Attraction.
"A Royal Slave," the attraction at the opera house Saturday night, was up against it in the way of a crowd. Perhaps the advanced prices scared some away, but no doubt the slim attendance was chiefly attributable to a big political gathering at the court house, and to other gatherings in the city.

But it is just to say those who failed to go missed a theatrical treat of a character that seldom is afforded an Ada audience. Scarcely was there a weak figure in the cast, indeed the bulk of the company was exceptionally strong.

The play is a story of old Mexico, with a touch of the historical, bristling with tropical tragedy, aglow with tropical love and pathos—at all times gorgeous in tropical color.

While all three of the ladies in the cast are to be praised, the work of Marie Van Tassel, as the countess, was notably fine. Her's is a very heavy part in which she is swayed by terrific storms of conflicting passions.

Possibly this company will be secured for a return engagement, in which case no doubt they will be greeted by a crowded house.

Ill-Gotten Gains Are of Small Avail in Days of Misfortune

Retributive Fate that has overtaken Members of the Clark Street Gang of Gamblers and Bunco
Men of which Mike McDonald was Chief.

Chicago — The papers announce that "Mike" McDonald, millionaire retired gambler, is on the verge of collapse from the effects of the trouble that has come to him in his old age. His third wife is in jail for the murder of Webster Guerin, the lover whose coldness drove her to insane jealousy and desperation. His second wife according to the news dispatches is dying in New Jersey. Traveling on the shady side of 60, McDonald faces physical breakdown and old age in which his ill-gotten dollars must be his only comfort.

Not long ago Al Adams, millionaire policy king of New York, committed suicide after serving a term in prison for obnoxiousness in his policy games. He still had a fortune, and his family who suffered the social taint of the father, continued to live in a brownstone palace. But his dollars gave Al Adams cold comfort in his old age.

Twenty-five years ago there flourished in Chicago the Clark street gambling czar, with McDonald at its head. This crowd made a chapter of history, but it is not the kind of history that is written to books, recording the city's growth. It is a story to be found in the records of the police and in the memories of men whose business led them to or other wise brought them into contact with the members of the gang.

Misery in Polluted Cash
Not only was McDonald the member of this lot who retired from gambling with the most money, but he was the one whose career after he had quit gambling seemed to refute the argument that money which is not only tainted but thoroughly polluted cannot bring happiness. Now that the tragic chapter of the murder of his lover by his wife has been added even the seeming reputation of McDonald's career has been destroyed. The fate of the rest of the crowd gives abundant evidence that the mills of the gods grind just as fine in these days as of old.

John Denning, one of the well-known Clark street figures in the days when that street was known from coast to coast on account of its vice, became a pauper and died.

Bob McCune, alias Kester Bob, is now a tramp in New York, a plain pered financially except McDonald himself was Patrick Casey, who had charge of the bar. Casey saved his money and died a few years ago fairly well off.

Others Pursued by Fate
James Papes, who was a thief as well as a gambler, broke into the treasury of Springfield, Ill., and died after fleeing to Canada to escape the penalty of his crime.

Jimmy Carroll, another of the crowd that alternated gambling with stealing, and who made the police a world of trouble, continued his outlaw career until he died seven years ago in prison.

Joseph Lewis, alias Hungry Joe, said to have renounced his former ways, is making in honest living and is doing better from the material standpoint than most of the men he formerly associated with.

Hummy Hoy, one of the most notorious denizens of Clark street in the wild days, and a gambler who stole and murdered with Al Adams, a bartender in the saloon of Count Riley in Clark street, and shot and killed him. He was tried and acquitted.

Most of the gambling men who committed murder in Clark street in those days were killed in fact, owing to the strength of the law and the courts. Hoy, however, murdered Mollie Holbrook, the widow of Buck Holbrook, a bartender who was killed at Hampton, Ill. Hoy and his wife went to Europe and have not been heard of in Chicago since.

Reign of the Bunco Men

Clark street became as infamous for the bunco game in the days of the McDonald crowd as for gambling. The bunco players were gamblers and the gamblers, or many of them, were bunco players. Harry Lawrence was one of the best known of the bunco men. Before McDonald became known as the gambler king of the city he was strongly interested in the bunco game.

In brief the bunco game was operated in this way: The players were dressed and dressed, sought their prey in the hotels, principally Steeple No. 1, and the stranger, asked him by any name that happened to occur to him. The prospective victim eyed the stranger with suspicion and told him stranger's town, and told him a string of boyhood happenings that never happened, but which the prospective victim could not dispute.

"By the way," stealer No. 2 would say, "I bought a ticket in a lottery the other day. Let's drop into the lottery office and see if I won anything."

There were a number of these "of fleas." A prosperous looking man sat at the desk and the walls were covered with fake bills and reports of lottery drawings. In front of the man at the desk was a big glittering pile of gold coin. The ticket was presented. Baiting the Sharp Trap.

You are lucky," said the man at the desk to stealer No. 2. You have won $2,500."

The cash was paid over to stealer No. 2 while the eyes of the county man bulged at the sight of so much easy money. That was the beginning. The victim was told there were drawings every day. Usually he bought a ticket, but no matter whether he did or not the stealer stuck close to him and spent money on him, principally for liquor. They would return to the lottery office and after some talk between the manager and the stealer the latter would agree to bet against a card game. Always he was lucky and sometimes he won large amounts. It became a comparatively easy matter to draw the funds of county merchants into the betting. As soon as he had lost all the bunco man thought he had with him he was steered out of the place and the lot

His finish came quicker than that of many of his associates, for he was stabbed by George Russell, alias White Pine, a bunco man. Russell acquired his alias from the fact that he came to Chicago from White Pine, Nev. He was a fighting man of the western type but was acquitted in his trial for the stabbing of Sir James.

Jerre Dunn in the Street.

But best known of all, not excepting McDonald himself was Jerre Dunn, slayer of "Jimmy" Elliott, the heavyweight prize fighter. Clark street during the reign of McDonald was the Mecca of many crooks, gamblers, confidence men, bad men and other classes of miscreants, but no figure ever appeared in the street who by force of his all-around wickedness, commanded the attention that Jerre Dunn got. Even Dunn's friends did not claim for him any degree of morality. Some of them say that he was a square with his partners in crime, but his history disproves even that. One of the men who knew him best says that Dunn never knew what physical fear was. If this was true it is about all the good that can be said of him, even after his death. Dunn died in New Jersey last year of malignant cancer. Wherever he went he made criminal history and some of it is worth retelling in any narrative of the Clark street crowd.

This notorious character made his appearance in Clark street in the early '80s. The vicious atmosphere of the

A DOWN EAST MINE.

COPPER DEPOSIT BEING WORKED IN WESTERN MASSACHUSETTS.

Thriving Small Mining Community
Which Is Doing Business in
Hoosac Hills — Looks Like
Western Mining Camp.

One would not naturally look for a copper mine in old Massachusetts, but such is one of the surprises one would meet with in traveling through the Hoosac hills in the valley of the Deerfield, for there would be found a mining community which looks for all like a western mining camp, bustling, perhaps, the saloons and the gambling places and might be appropriately called the Leadville of New England.

A well defined mineral belt appears in the hills of southern Vermont and continues, with varying richness of surface showings, across the state of Massachusetts to the south some say as far as Virginia. Whatever may be its extent, there certainly is ample evidence of no little wealth underground, but the great problem is to find the best points where it may be extracted at a maximum of profit—the same old problem that dominates the search for gold, silver, copper and iron wherever they exist and on the successful solution of which depends the development of satisfactory mining properties.

Mining is not new in Chatham and its vicinity but a boom like the present one is distinctly new there. For nearly a quarter of a century the largest pyrites mine in the United States has been profitably operated in the little settlement of Davis in the town of Rowe, just to the northwest of Chatham, but better known in connection with the latter town because Chatham is the point of shipment for ore to concerns throughout the state east of the Mississippi.

The great vein of pyrites—the largest known deposits in the world outside of Spain—is a part of the mineral belt which cuts across Massachusetts just east of the main Hoosac range. Where there is an immense body of pyrites it is generally safe to assume that copper, as well as iron, and it has been found to be the case in this instance several pockets having been discovered in the pyrites domain of the Davis company and indications located at several other points among the hills to the south.

About 25 years ago H. J. Davis, a New York chemist, who was interested in obtaining the mineral, owned a mine in the province of Quebec and showed samples from this mine in his New York office. A student at Amherst college who saw these specimens said he knew where there were extensive surface showings of the same thing in the town of Rowe. Mr. Davis lost no time in locating the place and purchased the land for the opening up of the immense ore body.

Three farms were included in his purchase, giving him about one and one-half miles on the strike of the vein, ample area to carry out the extensive undertaking he planned. Within three months he had a force of contractors and miners at work and the operations have been carried on day and night since.

At Chatham—as serene and self-contained a village as can be found in New England but constantly reminded of the world of commerce by the continuous passage of freight and passenger trains over the Boston & Maine railroad across the river—is the center of the mining region so its little hotel the focus of all the mining interest and enthusiasm thereabouts. In place of the occasional commercial travelers and chattering groups of townsmen the little office, heated by a gigantic wood fire is nightly crowded with men who have interests in or who work for the different properties and who linger in front of the blazing logs in an earnest discussion of strikes, possibilities of development, community of veins, amount of copper that may be found, etc.

ANGLO-FRENCH EXPO.

PLANS NOW MAKING FOR GREAT INDUSTRIAL SHOW.

Plans for the Grounds and Buildings
Which Are to Be the Most Magnificent Ever Built for an Exposition.

The Franco-British exposition of 1905 is in the first stages of construction and in a year's time London will have the largest exhibition that has ever been held in Great Britain. It is to take up 140 acres of ground at Shepherd's Bush. Though essentially an industrial exhibition it will of course have other interests and we are promised in particular that the many phases of art will be prominent. For instance there is the Indian Court and the which will confront visitors.

who enter by the principal entrance. This is to be an example of Indian architecture, brilliant in color and fantastic in shape. There will be two terraces running completely round the lake a bridge across it and a path leading out from the sides into the water. At the far end of the lake which will be traversed by many boats there is Congress Hall. It is met ings of all kinds will be held and scientific and other societies invited to use it for conferences. At the back of Congress Hall there is to be a transparent cascade, lighted underneath and in front with colored lamps, which will play with picturesque effect at night. The designing of the buildings of which the exhibition committee has control is in the hands of Mr. Belcher, a former president of the Royal Society of British Architects, and M. Toudoire, who designed the Architectural Court of Esplanade des Invalides of the Paris exposition. There is to be a Fine Arts palace, in which a unique collection of British and French paintings under the superintendence of Sir Isidore Spielmann will be exhibited an Applied Arts palace, an Ancient Art palace, and a building for decorative art. Finally, we may expect a good deal in original architecture from the various French and English towns or colonies which will house their wares of their own construction.

Our picture depicts a portion of the stadium for sports of every description. The arrangements here are in the hands of the British Olympic association and as there are to be a cinder path, a motor race track, a cycle track, a trotting track—each separate—a swimming bath and a large area of turf in the center a tremendous programme will be possible.

Though the exhibition will probably run for only six months every building will be of steel construction and fireproof. Running round the outskirts an elevated railway will carry passengers from point to point, and enable them to have an excellent view of the exhibition. Music and amusements will be almost as prominent as commercial competition refreshments will possibly be more so and an entente cordiale spirit will go a long way towards making the exhibition a success.

The nervous foreigner got up and went back to the conductor of the street car.

Pardone, m'sieu, said he, but see can't he run so slow and why if you please? Does it not so?

Yes, replied the conductor. We can't help it though. You see the car ahead is behind.

The foreigner's eyes opened wider. "Would you mind saying him again?" he asked apologetically.

I say, replied the conductor, loud er than before, that the car ahead is behind. See?

The foreigner returned to his seat. "Zee car is behind he sees behind," said he to himself. "Most wonderful, most astonishing, is this country? I do not understand but some day perhaps I shall—Judge."
